Here's the final programme for Strasbourg. I have included web links when possible. Minor adjustments might still be made, you know how it goes…

- Sunday afternoon : arrival of all groups
- Monday 8/12 9h30-11h : Visit of an art center in Strasbourg (La Basse-cour des Miracles) and meeting with a local artist who creates moving structures from waste. La Basse-Cour des Miracles is an association of visual artists based in Strasbourg that provides shared studios, organizes exhibitions, and promotes alternative, collective creation. I thought a visit would fit our project, as it offers a real example of a collaborative cultural space that fosters creativity, community engagement, and sustainable artistic expression.
  (The initial talk with a Unesco representative has been cancelled as I found out in Elche that both the Danish and the Austrian schools are already part of the Unesco School Network. I will reschedule a presentation later this year, for our school, and our Spanish friends are more than likely to join us if they are interested).
- Monday 13h30-15h30 : visit of the city center with a local guide
- Monday 16h-18h : Zoom meeting with Beth Langley from the Labyrinth society. I thought it would be interesting to invite someone from The Labyrinth Society to share how and why labyrinths can be used in an educational context. This approach connects perfectly with our project's environmental dimension, as labyrinths encourage reflection, connection with nature, and mindful movement. It also supports students' well-being and mindfulness, while serving as a perfect tool for cross-curricular learning, linking art, science, literature, and environmental education in a creative and meaningful way. Beth will be live from South Carolina, with only a 6-hour time difference. The zoom meeting will be held in the hotel Eric and I will be staying at from Sunday to Monday (right in the city center, as the other hotel was fully booked). On Monday evening, we will join everyone at the Mercure Hotel where you will all be staying.
- Tuesday 08h30-11h30 or 9h-12h : I invited an experienced national facilitator to lead a Climate Fresk workshop in a local school. I organised a similar activity for students during the workshop in Chalon, but this time it will be us teachers taking part in it. It fits our project's goals, combining environmental awareness, collaboration, and critical thinking and the pedagogical approach is also innovative and inspiring.
- Tuesday 14h-17h or 18h : Parliament (organised by Gitte)
  - visit / tour
  - interactive and immersive exhibition (the link you sent me)
  - From what Gitte has told me, the meeting with an MEP won't be possible due to a recent change in the EU Parliament's calendar.
- Tuesday dinner : I have booked (and it was difficult !!) a table for the group in the oldest and most traditional restaurant in Strasbourg. It is located opposite the Cathedral, and the building is just outstanding (early 15th century!). Have a look here.

- Wedneday morning : visit and presentation of the largest participative neighborhood in France (La Citadelle) with a person from a green urban development company (SPL 2 rives)
- Wednesday afternoon : The Austrian and French groups depart

I haven't booked other restaurants yet. Will try and so so shortly. As you know, Strasbourg becomes particularly busy in December, as the Christmas market attracts many tourists from all over Europe.
